

The Fulton Deugo Family

The Fulton story begins in the early 1840s when Scottish immigrant John Fulton and his two brothers left East Kilbride, Scotland to begin a new life in rural Ontario, Canada.

The brothers settled on 400 acres of mixed forest that included thousands of sugar maple trees in Cedar Hill, near the quaint village of Pakenham and about 45 minutes west from the nation's capital. Legend has it that the Fulton brothers learned the art of maple syrup making from First Nations people as well as other settlers who called the area home.

Many of the older trees—some more than 200 years old—have been tapped every year since the 1800s as successive generations continued the practice of maple syrup and sugar making.

Today, Shirley Deugo, a fourth generation Fulton, and her son, Scott Deugo continue to operate the historic Fulton's Pancake House & Sugar Bush. Fulton's is made up of 400 acres of mixed forest, over 9 km of walking and Nordic trails, features a 120-seat restaurant, beautiful Maple Shoppe, General Store, maple sugar camp (production facility) and main office.

Shirley's daughters, Lorraine and Pamela, remain involved with the family farm, helping when needed on site and in the background. They provide fresh eyes and are full of ideas.

Shirley and George also had nine grandchildren - 7 grandsons and 2 granddaughters - all who have been great taste testers and are great quality control officers. The grandchildren happily help out on the farm and can be found doing many tasks, from bottling syrup to flipping pancakes.

"Every member of the family loves the farm, the people we host from all over the world, and more importantly, the art involved in making maple syrup," says Shirley. "We invite you, your family, and friends to share in our family treasure."

Fulton's Pancake House & Sugar Bush has grown from a small personal production sugar camp to a four-season international Canadian destination. Whether it is spring, summer, fall, or winter, Fulton's has just what you need. The facility and grounds are home to self-guided and group maple tours, schools, seniors, corporate retreats and conferences, and family day trips during the traditional spring maple syrup season.
